Two graduate medals were awarded this year. Grellmanns unsympathetic account of Gypsy life finally interprets the Gypsies under the Enlightenment category of Naturvolk, as living in ultimate primitivity and wretchedness, lacking in any but the most basic skills and techniques of civilisation, almost entirely lacking in civilised thought and morality, whose only saving grace is a certain affinity towards the arts evident in their dancing and musicianship and practice of chiromancy ; his account culminates in a pseudo-philanthropic Josephinist plan for their forced cultural assimilation into the Austrian state, so as to maximise their economic usefulness.
